

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments.....	vii
Introduction: “ The terrible inhibition of the atom ” .....	1
I. The Need to Know, 1939–1945
1. Before Manhattan: Nuclear fission from self-censorship to “absolute secrecy,” 1939-1942 .....	20
2. “ The very heart of security ”: Compartmentalization and the Manhattan Project, 1942-1945.....	58
3. “ The problem of secrecy ”: Wartime visions of postwar control, 1942-1945 .....	92
II. Public Secrets, 1945–1947
4. “ Publicity day ”: Hiroshima, Nagasaki, and the coordination of release, 1944-1945 .....	128
5. From “dissemination” to “control” : The origins of “restricted data,” 1945-1946.....	167
6. Making “declassification” : Systemizing information review, 1945-1947 .....	193
III. Cold War Secrecy, 1947–1969
7. “ Information control ”: The early Atomic Energy Commission and the struggle for policy, 1947-1949 .....	221
8. “ A very black day ”: Espionage and the end of the monopoly, 1949-1953 .....	269
9. Peaceful atoms, dangerous scientists : The epistemology of Cold War secrecy, 1953-1969.....	325
IV. Challenging Secrecy, 1969–1980
10. “ Stalking the H-bomb ”: Publicizing and privatizing laser fusion, 1969-1975.....	353
11. Atoms for peace, atoms for terror : Debating secrecy and safeguards, 1970-1978.....	385
12. “ The one remaining secret ”: An activist draws the hydrogen bomb, 1978-1979 .....	407

V. Secrecy in a suspicious age, 1980–2008

Epilogue and conclusion .....	455
Bibliography.....	471